COAST GUARDSMEN ARE PICKED UP BY MEN FROM NAVY YARD

Seven Coast Guard sailors narrowly escaped drowning today when their whaleboat capsized in a squall off the navy yard.
The men were rescued by hastily-manned Navy Yard small boats. Clinging to the hull of their overturned boat they were picked up in the yard launch canoe.
Lieutenant Arthur Merrill was in charge of the boat. He had just left the Coast Guard buoy tender. Paddling with his boat's crew when the wind began to rise. When a quarter mile off the yard a sudden squall came on.

FULLER'S VETO KILLS AUTO 'GAS' TAX BILL

The gasoline tax bill introduced today, Governor Fuller vetoed the measure, and the House sustaining his veto.
With the Legislature ready to prorogue there is no chance of any gasoline tax legislation this year. The vote today was 117 in favor of the bill. It seemed the bill falling by its failure to attract a two-thirds vote, necessary to override the veto.
In his veto message, the Governor derided the failure of the Legislature to accept his recommendation for making the registration fee so automobiles $0 per cent. of existing rates.
He declared the bill, as the Legislature sent it to him, with a provision for a registration fee of $3 together with the gasoline tax of two cents a gallon, left him no choice but to veto it.
"Because of this $3 registration fee, our revenue would be $300,000 less than we now get," he said. "And this in spite of the fact that we are committed to spending the amount regularly obtained from this source."
To make up this difference, caused by the flat $3 fee, the gasoline tax would have to be four cents, something to which I cannot agree."

MRS. SNYDER WILL TAKE STAND IN OWN DEFENSE; GRAY'S ALIBI SMASHED

Long Island City, N. Y., April 28.—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder will take the witness stand tomorrow morning. She will hurl the lie into the teeth of Judd Gray, her alleged co-conspirator, in a mighty effort to escape the electric chair for the murder of her art-editor husband.
This was officially announced today by counsel for the blonde-haired Viking woman, who, with Gray, is on trial for her life here.

"Mrs. Snyder, upon advice of her counsel, will take the stand in her own defense," was the statement signed by Edgar Hamilton.
It is a dramatic move to counteract the damning effect of Judd Gray's confession, in which he placed the onus for the actual slaying of the husband upon the wife. Mrs. Snyder will have, from her cold, unsmiling lips, the story of her life with Snyder, that culminates in her own home on the night that the intoxicated husband was done to death with a window sledge and picture wire as he lay asleep on his bed.
"This is the last time," said the counsel of the accused woman, "that I will see her in court."

'SHOOT TO KILL' ORDER FOR LOOTERS IN FLOOD

New Orleans, La., April 28.—"Shoot to kill."

Already five negroes have been arrested for looting, and others have been frightened off. If there is further looting the looters will be shot.

GUN-TOTING HEIRESS LOSES FREEDOM FIGHT

Elaine M. Morrill, Belmont's gun-toting heiress, today lost her fight for discharge from the McLean Hospital at Waterville, where she is confined as insane.
At a private hearing in East Cambridge district court, Judge Robert Walcott ordered her confined at the hospital for an indefinite period.
The judge refused to grant a motion by the girl's attorney, Jeremiah J. Mahoney, that her case be continued, as she could be examined by private alienists and her report submitted to the court.
Miss Morrill, who inherited a fortune from her father-teacher, first came to public attention when she was arrested in Springfield for drawing a revolver on a police officer who stopped her automobile. The Springfield judge, before whom the girl's case was scheduled to be heard, suggested that she be examined as to her sanity. "The heiress voluntarily went to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, where the experts decided she was suffering from a mild form of insanity."

Madeiros Quits Death Cell; Near Collapse

So weak and exhausted he had to be supported by a prison guard, Celestino Madeiros, condemned slayer and strange figure in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, was removed from the death house at Charlestown State Prison today and lodged in his old cell in the Cherry Hill section of the prison.
The reprieve granted Madeiros at the eleventh hour by Governor Fuller and quickly presented his removal from the death house, as the new date for the execution of Madeiros, who murdered Wrentham bank cashier, has been set for the week of July 10, the same time as the date for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.
At 7:30 this morning, Deputy Sheriff madeiros was taken to the death house at Charlestown State Prison today and lodged in his old cell in the Cherry Hill section of the prison.

THIS IS written on the two-day trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific and back. Sixty times on the six-thousand-mile journey you are asked about "business conditions." Conditions are what they should be, in the world's richest country. Two factors cause needless worry. Supplies are purchased in smaller quantities, not because buyers distrust future conditions, but because deliveries, greatly improved by railroad and motor truck, make big orders, trying up capital, no longer necessary.

DAMAGES ASKED IN CAMBRIDGE AUTO CASE

George Herman Ruth, known in the sports world as "Babe," struck out in Middlesex Superior Court today when he failed to appear in a $7,000 suit for damages pending against him since 1918.

The first strike was called when Michael Cunningham versus George Herman Ruth was on the trial list and neither appeared. The second strike was called when Ruth's counsel telephoned the clerk of court to inform him that the case was settled out of court.

The third strike and out was called when the clerk removed the case from the trial list and entered after the name of the plaintiff and respondent, "settled, $1."

Michael Cunningham of Cambridge was the plaintiff. He charged that on June 23, 1918, he was struck and knocked down by Ruth's auto on Cambridge street. NICHOLS' BILL FOR SUBWAY SHELVED

Mayor Nichols' bill for subway extension costing $10,000,000 at Governor square (Kenmore station) was submerged today when the House voted "next annual session" on the measure.

The House vote followed an adverse report by joint committee of the Senate and House. An attempt was made to substitute the bill for the adverse report was defeated 138 to 11.

The vote to put it over was practically unanimous.

Governor square was characterized as "the worst spot in the city" by Mayor Nichols, who appeared as a speaker before the joint committee, and in explaining his bill he declared the 70 cent fare must not be increased to pay for rapid transit extensions.

Boston would pay 75 per cent of the cost of the improvements, a deficit was caused the Elevated, the Mayor said in reply to questions. The remainder of any deficit resulting from these improvements would be assessed among other cities and towns near the Hub.

This proposal is a step towards to take at the present time, asserted Representative Henry L. Shattuck of Boston, who opposes the bill. "It leaves a good deal to guesswork because it will be hard to determine and separate the various factors of cost arising from these proposed improvements."

Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the Metropolitan Planning Board, Paul Hines, secretary of the Boston Automobile Club, Francis M. Carroll of the Governor Square Association and James T. Sullivan spoke in favor of the Mayor's plan.

Martin Lonneman, during the hearing and again on the floor of the House, strenuously opposed the bill. Lonneman said the bill is inconsistent with the city's plan of slipping something through in the last hours of the session.

HUB STOWAY BEGS RIGHT TO STAY IN U. S.

Renouncing his own country and Soviet rule, and ordered deported from America, Alexander Minessa, twenty-year-old stowaway, today made an appeal at the immigration station that touched the hearts and pocketbooks of hardened inspectors.

He said he was born in Siberia and was taken to Manchuria at the age of eight years. Living in Harbin for 15 years, he said he was persecuted and forced to witness the murder of his father by Communists.

He suffered torture when he refused to acquiesce to the Soviet rule and fled to America, he said.

There stood away on the American steamer AMALIA, arriving at the Hub, yesterday. Officers of the ship said hunger forced him from his hiding place. He worked secretly on the trip, they said.

Minessa, when ordered deported to Siberia, took an appeal to Secretary of Labor Davis, embodying a description of his horror-filled life. Immigration officers took up a purse to provide him with necessities, should his appeal be granted by Davis.

"I am not a man without a country," he said. "I want America to be my country."

GRAY'S ALIBI SMASHED AT DEATH TRIAL

Since among the man whose intimate friend he had been since their early school days, Judd Gray still set his foot on his eyes on the floor.

Mrs. Snyder returned to the testimony eagerly and a feeling came over her face as Haddon Gray spoke of seeing her pictures.

Under cross-examination Haddon Gray gave more details of Judd Gray's story. He said that while in the closet the defendant said he saw the burglar "take money."

When the burglar had gone, he said, he left the closet and found the money bag on the bed. In his hand he found a key which he had seen Judd Gray use to open the door.

Q—Did you do anything in your power to cover up your friend's trial, although you knew that this might obstruct justice? A—I did.

Q—Why? A—I thought I was protecting him from being a victim of circumstances.

Lied to Save Friend

Q—When did you first learn that Judd Gray was charged with a murder? A—Not definitely until Police Chief Martin Cadin told me Monday afternoon.

Q—When did you see Gray first after his arrest? A—Late Monday night I told him I was sorry he was in trouble and that I would get him a lawyer.

Q—What was your next conversation with the case? A—Late Monday morning three Syracuse detectives told me Judd had confessed and asked for his bag. I told them I knew nothing about it.

Q—That was a falsehood? A—No.

Q—You lied although you knew he was charged with murder? A—Absolutely.

Q—You lied to District Attorney Newcomb when you were brought down here? A—Yes, at first.

Q—Had your own lawyer told you to tell the truth? A—He had.

Q—Why didn't you? A—I didn't believe Judd was guilty.

Q—On the other hand, wasn't your purpose to withhold all you could until you had compared notes with Judd Gray so that you would not be indicted as an accessory to the murder? A—It was not.

Charles Platt, Gray's other Syracuse friend, then took the stand.

Platt corroborated Haddon Gray's recital of the Judd Gray case—burglary story and told again of taking the black bag to his office. He said next morning he opened the bag and handed up the contents.

What then he asked District Attorney Newcomb.

"I took the bundle down to Mahoney, the superintendent of the building, and asked him to dispose of it. I gave the bundle to him and he told me he had burned it. Mahoney said he burned the bundle."

Attorney Wallace for Mrs. Snyder then asked:

Q—Of course, when you handed up the contents of the bag you saw the envelope bottle?

"I did not," said Platt.

Q—You were taken to Syracuse police headquarters after Gray had been arrested? A—Yes.

Q—You did not tell them about burning Gray's stuff? A—No.

Q—Although you knew then that he was charged with murder? A—That's right.

Q—You didn't say anything about

Dictator Will Rule Louisiana During the Flood

New Orleans, April 28.—Louisiana and New Orleans are to be ruled by a civilian dictator, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has decided, during the flood disaster.

The dictator appointed is former Governor John M. Parker. His main duties will be to lead the fight against suffering, disease and famine.

During the emergency until the next week when New York detectives arrived? A—No.

Q—But you took the suitcase until today? A—I haven't seen him yet.

Q—You were brought down here? A—Yes.

Q—Did you tell the district attorney about burning them? A—No.

Q—You went back to Syracuse with Haddon Gray and learned from him that Judd Gray had confessed to murder and yet you withheld your information for another week? A—No.

Q—Did you protect the stenographer? A—No.

Q—But after talking with Haddon Gray so that your stories might conform, then you told? A—Yes.

Q—You valued being arrested as an accessory? A—No.

At 10:30 o'clock, Mrs. Snyder looking around the room and Gray dropping his chin on his hand and staring absently at the floor.

Paul Mathis, a Jamaica Plain driver, was the first witness. He told of driving Gray from Jamaica Plain to New York on the morning of March 28, the day Snyder was killed.

As Atty. William Milford for Gray cross-examined the lead driver, Mrs. Snyder showed keen interest, leaning forward in her chair and cheering him vigorously.

Gray, although what the witness was saying implicated him and not Mrs. Snyder, showed no trace of interest, not once glancing at the man.

Frank Voorheis, a New York Central conductor who was in charge of the train for Chicago that left New York at 8:10 o'clock the morning of March 20, was the next witness.

He testified as a witness as having occupied a seat in parlor car No. 11 of that train.

The conductor said he remembered Gray because he had a ticket to Syracuse but a Pullman ticket which he had bought on the way.

Q—When did you first learn these things belonged to Judd Gray? A—The same day.

Q—But you did not tell the authorities what you had done until they came and asked you a week later? A—No.

The State here noted its case.

MURDERERS TAKEN FROM DEATH CELL

Warden James L. Hovett went to the death house. He found Madros had already eaten a breakfast of toast, coffee and butter.

PRISONER VERY WEAK. The prisoner was so weak and exhausted he could scarcely stand.

"Can you walk over to Cherry Hill?" the deputy warden asked him. The distance from the death house to the Cherry Hill section is about 300 yards.

"Test! Test! I can make it," he said. He was led from the cell and through the Cherry Hill Hall.

"Better help me a little," he murmured to the deputy warden. The officer put an arm about the prisoner and he carried him across the prison yard.

UNDER CLOSE WATCH. The last few feet of the distance Madros was almost carried, as he stumbled had fallen him. He was placed in the cell and a watch was immediately set in the corridor outside.

This watch will be maintained night and day, until Madros is again removed to the death house, ten days prior to his execution in July.

It was the second trip Madros made from the death house to the Cherry Hill section since he was taken there by Governor Fuller because of his illness.

Madros was confined in the death house from Aug. 27 to Sept. 1 of last year. He was at that time saved his life.

Madros was exhausted and the prisoner apparently enjoyed the sunlight and fresh air of the prison yard.

"It's great to get out in the air again. I'm glad to have a few months more to live," he murmured to the deputy warden.

CHEERS SACCO, VANZETTI. The reprieve of Madros was welcomed by Sacco and Vanzetti, who were in the prison at that time.

They took this to mean that the Governor was making a mistake in the study of the whole case that will prevent the questioning of Madros.

Madros confessed that he was implicated in the South Braintree murders for which Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted and he also said that neither of the two condemned men were in the murder gang. It was largely on this confession that the last plea for a new trial for the two radicals was made and denied by Judge Webster Thayer.

Madros' position is unique in criminal history. Always when a man has been reprieved from death, the law has made some additional ground for hope, however slight it might be.

In the case of Madros no such hope exists. He is simply being kept alive for the benefit of two other men.

MILLS SEES BIG OPPORTUNITY IN MOVIES

"There is an urgent need for young men and women to take the place of those who have been so long before the eyes of the public," Milton Mills, film portrayer of heroic "backwoods" roles, declared today when he arrived to address Harvard's new movie class.

The actor's statement was made just before he told the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, in an interesting address, that the virgin gold waiting in Hollywood for screen aspirants is a fourth and of some $25,000 in the films, more than $1,000 receive only an average salary.

Mills also asserted in the interview that Hollywood's curse is the influx of vain men and women who have convinced themselves that they are beautiful but who, in the majority, have no more claim to beauty than the judge who judged them.

To the Harvard men, Milton Mills gave great praise to the struggling extra of movieland.

"They constitute the nursery of the industry where the stars and principal players of tomorrow are incubated," he said.

"Very serious problems is the discovery and development of new talent. There is a great dearth of leading men and women. We must have new faces in the perennial cry of the producer. And his hope lies in the ranks of the extra."

"The extra's sole instrument, in most cases, or enduring his or her unenviable lot is the glimmering promise of advancement. Ability or lack of it is a matter of indifference or, according to one's temperament, indifference."

"The greatest problem the industry is the dearth of good story material, and this constitutes like-wise the star's greatest worry."

"We are still in a phase of this business when we must draw our materials largely from books and plays. We are all looking forward to the time when more stories are fashioned directly for the screen by a new type of literary worker."

"Our universities may help in creating this new type."

"Never before in the history of civilization has there been felt such a need for what is known as entertainment. It is a disquieting fact in modern life that very few of the men and women who carry the burden of the world's work find a compensating joy in that work. And amusement provides escape from modern life's pressure and incidence of reality."

DISBARRED LAWYER IS HELD AS EMBEZZLER

Providence, April 28 (A.P.)—George R. Macleod, 58, disbarred local attorney, pleaded not guilty to charges of embezzlement and forging and uttering when arraigned in Superior Court here today. He was held in $10,000 bail for trial and was taken to Providence county jail in default of bail.

Macleod was arrested Tuesday in Freehold, N. J., for the local attorney on complaint of two clients. He was disbarred by the Rhode Island Supreme Court on April 12 last.

2 WOMEN HELD IN HOUSE FIRE

Palmer, April 28 (A.P.)—Accused of seeking to defraud insurance companies in connection with the burning of their home here two years ago, Mrs. Eva Smith, 40, of Northford, Ct., and her daughter, Mary, pleaded not guilty in district court today and were held in $2,000 each for a hearing.

The arrests, made in Springfield after a hearing before arbitrators on adjustment of insurance, followed long investigation by Deputy State Fire Marshal J. L. Loomis.

18 Chinese Radicals Executed by Police

Peking, April 28 (A.P.)—Li Ts. Chao, well known Communist, and seventeen other Chinese, arrested recently during a Chinese police raid on premises within the Soviet embassy compound here, were executed this afternoon. They were strangled at police headquarters.

It had been expected that the prisoners would be tried in a special court formed to hear the evidence against those arrested in the raid.

The northern authorities, whose headquarters are at Peking, have claimed that the raid resulted in the discovery of documents showing that Soviet Russia was actively supporting the Chinese against the northern authorities.

Apparently, however, the police decided that the evidence discovered against the prisoners completely proved their guilt and the court, having somewhat informally investi-

Those able to swim reached for their companions and helped them to hold on until rescuers arrived. The rescued men were Lieut. An. POLISH WORKS BEST 'CURE' FOR COLLEGE MEN

Every college boy ought to be put to hard labor in a lumber camp for a year after graduation. In the opinion of H. E. Gould, general superintendent of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

"I have yet to find a college boy who does not think of entering a plant that he can find the general superintendent and general manager had put himself in his job," Gould asserted, in addressing a business conference at the University Club today at the opening of a two-day session.

The conference, arranged by the Department of Education and Vocational Guidance of the University Club, brought together with college leaders to discuss how best to adjust the college man to business.

AND COST IS GREAT.

"My idea of the college man I got again at the breakfast table this morning," said Supt. Gould in his first of the discussion. "Heaven knows, I pay plenty for it."

"What these college boys need is rough work. They ought to be sent to a lumber camp for a year. They ought to be told they are to work and think and die and live for everything they get and that it's not going to be handed to them on a platter."

"They ought to be made realize that they are not going to start in where their fathers left off."

Edward J. Frost, vice-president of William Fiske's Sons Co., was not more kindly in his treatment of college men.

"It is not easy to define the attitude of the business man toward the college man, since there are three points of view," he said.

"There is the business man who does not care whether his help is college or not; the man who is obsessed with the idea that only the college man will do, and the man who believes that the college man works himself up to better qualified."

"LIABILITY" AT FIRST.

"The college man is a distinct liability in business for a time, because he is at a great disadvantage, particularly if he is competing with a very bright non-college chap who has a background of experience and the technique of the business."

"College men are taken into business, however, because executives feel with the training they get in college and then in the business world that they come out far ahead."

Other speakers included: R. Quincy, service manager of the Good Rubber Co.; Walter D. Hoar, vice-chairman of the executive committee, the J. Walter Thompson Co.; R. H. Brown, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; Clifford H. Moore, dean of the faculty of Arts and Sciences at Harvard; Kenneth M. Wilson, professor of economics at Wesleyan University; Franklin H. Smith, employment manager, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.; and Isaac H. Bloom, field of the Retail Trade Board, Boston Chamber of Commerce.

POLAND RAIDED BY LITHUANIANS

Warsaw, Poland, April 28 (A.P.)—After several months of complete calm along the Polish-Lithuanian and Polish-Russian frontiers, the newspapers report that several sanguinary conflicts have occurred.

Bands of Lithuanian irregulars, they state, have twice crossed the border and fired at blockhouses. Polish frontier guards are said to have driven them off, but the raiders escaped, carrying off their wounded.

MISS KENNEY MATRON OF HOUSE OF DETENTION

Miss Mary Kenney, for twenty years an employee at the Boston House of Detention where female prisoners are detained over night, was today named chief matron of the institution by Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson.

Miss Genevieve Baratta, who has also been employed at the House of Detention for many years, was named first assistant matron. Miss Kenney, whose long and faithful service has been recognized by Commissioner Wilson, takes the place made vacant by the recent retirement of Miss Mary E. Smith, for many years the chief matron.

The volunteer campaign teams were organized under the joint leadership of Mr. Hardwick and Howard Country. Team leaders chosen are as follows: Warren D. Arnold, George H. Carey, Frank S. AIRCRAFT GUN IS RECEIVED BY CADETS

A three-inch anti-aircraft gun with a range of four miles and weighing seven tons, was received in Boston today as a part of the equipment of the First Corps of Cadets. The gun is the first piece of ordnance heavier than a rifle or machine gun that the cadets have ever had in their 200 years of existence.

The gun, which cost $10,000, will be supplemented by two anti-aircraft searchlights of 2,000,000 candlepower each. The lights are now on their way from Fort Sam Houston at San Antonio, Tex.

The anti-aircraft gun will be housed in the Cadet armory on Columbus avenue. The gun has an overall length of twenty feet and can be elevated to an angle of 45 degrees. It is drawn by a heavy ammunition truck. Lieutenant Franklin W. Treadwell will be in charge of the range section for the gun and Lieutenant William J. Rochester is executive officer.

16-TON ROLLER ON RAMPAGE; ONE HURT

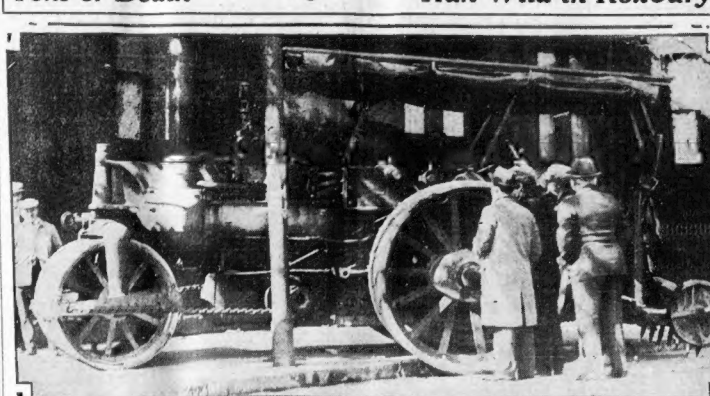

Rambling downhill at a rate of 25 miles an hour, a runaway, driverless roller coaster, sent automobiles and pedestrians scattering for safety today in Tremont street, Roxbury, between the Mission Church and Roxbury Crossing.

The operator, Calvin C. Wilder, of the Roxbury street, was hurled to the ground and suffered a broken leg. He was taken to Peter Bent Bowen Hospital.

Coming into the curb at Sewall street, the 16-ton roller slid along for a half of the sidewalk, and was finally braked to a stop by the pressure of the outside curb. The front of the roller was not a few feet from the curb of Dr. John F. Sullivan at 150 Tremont street when the roller stopped.

To the right, Timothy Foley of 150 Tremont street, saw the roller creeping up on him just in time to get out of the way, avoiding a collision with the roller, which was moving to traffic, until he saw the roller stop.

Tons of Death

Run Wild in Roxbury

A mad episode from its path was all that saved dozens of persons in Tremont street, Roxbury, today, when a 16-ton steam roller got out from under control of its driver and blundered along the street like a tank in war. Calvin C. Wilder, operator of the vehicle, suffered a broken leg. Great damage was narrowly averted as the monstrous engine stopped its mad career within a few feet of a doctor's office.

BOY KEPT ALIVE 5 DAYS AMazes PHYSICIANS

Roscoe, Va. April 28 (A.P.)—Water L. Booth, the 13-year-old youth who has been kept alive for five days by artificial respiration, induced by the nostril of his friends, was better today.

"It's amazing, but true," said the physicians. The tendency with which the worst youth clings to life has astounded the doctors.

There is no hope. He is steadily growing weaker and it is only a matter of time until the system collapses under the strain of artificial breathing.

Morrisstown, N. J., April 28 (A.P.)—George Armstrong, 31, an orchestra leader, was found dead in his bed in a rooming house on Speedwell avenue today beside a young woman who was unconscious and suffering from a bullet wound in the head.

The death of Hauser was attributed to a bullet wound in the head.

The killing was discovered by a neighbor of Hauser, who reported to a police officer that he had found the body of a man in the rooming house.

The woman, who was 28 years old, will die.

George Armstrong said that Hauser had been dead seven hours.

Chief Horner, wider and everything pointed towards suicide. He said a letter found in the room indicated the intention of the couple to the together.

A .38 caliber revolver with two cartridges discharged was found near the bed.

Police said one bullet entered the head of Hauser, who lay in the head of the woman. Shot about their heads gave rise to the belief that the two had been beaten.

The Grand Jury also returned an indictment against Hauser, who is alleged to have transported Vice De Main from Brooklyn to New Jersey for immoral purposes.

TALE OF THE NOISY FROGS RETOLD IN SACCO CASE

"It is rather a far cry from frogs to the Sacco-Vanzetti case, but Eugene C. Upton, Boston attorney, quotes a fable dealing with frogs in a letter to Governor Fuller in regard to the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The letter follows:

"An agriculturist in Boetia approached an inn-keeper and asked if he was in need of frogs' legs for his guests and where told that there was a demand for such delicacy, and that he would like to supply the inn-keeper with frogs and was asked in what amount he could furnish them and replied in any amount required, and was told to bring in the next morning, to which he agreed.

"On the following morning he came in with six frogs and was asked why he didn't bring more and he said that from the noise they made in the pool below his house he thought there was a million but was mistaken.

"Respectfully submitted, Eugene C. Upton, Boston attorney, with the assurance of my opinion that the great body of the citizens, though not noisy, is solidly behind the orderly process of our Judiciary."

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON HAPPENINGS IN SOCIETY CIRCLES

Society Journeying to Baltimore for Maryland Hunt Club Race Saturday

THE SPORT OF KINGS AS served up at the Maryland Hunt Cup Race, on Saturday next, is the magnet that is taking ever so many of the smart sporting fraternity down to Baltimore to celebrate this annual classic as it should fittingly be celebrated. This 34th renewal of the Hunt Cup race is the sportiest of affairs, over the big stiff posts and rail fences and across the meadows of the lovely Worthington Valley of Maryland. Society turns out for the race as for no other and surrounds the affair with all sorts of jollifications.

A HOSTESS PAR EXCELLENCE of the gladsome occasion, with a lovely home in the Valley, is a former Boston girl, Mrs. "Tom" Putnam, the one-time Margaret Bennett. Making up the Bennett trio of sisters (each notable) are Mrs. Edward Cunningham of Dedham and Mrs. Bulkeley Wells of New York. Mrs. Wells has been visiting at Dedham with her sister, and both matrons are departing for Baltimore and the big event. Mrs. Louis Bonie, another young groom of the smart Norfolk set, goes to Baltimore.

MISS BEATRICE HOWELL, shining light of the younger set, who rides to hounds and goes cross-country with the fleetest, is in the contingent Baltimore-bound. She, like the others, is prominent in the Norfolk hunting fraternity, a charming spirit, "exactly popular" in her exclusive circle. Baltimore's bluest blood, thoroughbred horse-flesh, gentleman riders (Boston has the Tuckerman-Dorwell team riding), a wonderful course over immense private estates, and the world of wealth and fashion gathering from afar, such are the elements that make the Maryland Hunt Race brilliant in the extreme.

THEY ARE CALLING THIS affair on May 13, at the Statter, a "Cotton" Ball, and declare that every costume must be made of cotton. But, so far as I have observed, cotton no longer appears the everyday thing of toweeling and cutting. It is in such a grandmother's day. No, indeed! Today "cotton" is richly piled and richly toned, like velvet, or originally designed in rainbow tints and woven miraculously into a fabric of heavy brocade. Or again, it may be a "rayon" gossamer, light and colored like a floating cloudlet. Such are the marvels that the loom and the spinning turn out for Madame and Mademoiselle of 1927. And in all the story will they be at the "Cotton" Ball.

FOR MRS. WILLIAM WHITMAN, JR., SOMETHING VERY STRIKING DONE IN COTTON that looks exactly like heavy white silk, embroidered in gold, and will be one of the hits of the evening, without a doubt. William Whitman, 33, (suppose of that attractive young matron who was Miss Marie Warren) goes to the ball as a Chauve Souris too doll, done brilliantly in cottons glorified beyond belief.

"COOLIDGE" COATS AND "LIDO" PYJAMAS HAVE THEIR INNINGS, OF COURSE, FOR THE NEW cottons lend themselves excellently to colors primitive or barbaric. Miss Agnes Boardman, in a Lido Venice beach suit, and Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr., in a coolie coat and trousers that look like the deplorable suits, are decorative assets of the forthcoming ball. Mrs. Louis Curtis, Jr. has chosen a costume of the ever-popular Chauve Souris inspiration.

MISS FRANCESCA BRAGIOTTI AND HER SISTER, MISS BERTHE, WILL BE UNUSUAL FIGURES at the ball. Their costumes are authentic Far Eastern affairs, Javanese, I believe, brought from the other side of the world by Miss Ruth St. Dunst to give to her Boston friends. Miss Betty Moulton, a debutante of the past winter, will be the demure Dutch girl, white and golden braids and many petticoats. Miss Agnes Boardman's dark eyes and sleek, shorn locks will top the array of a Castilian lady of high degree, jets and laces and velvets of black, beautifully woven and gleaming richly, but still, after all, cotton. It is quite unbelievable, cotton can be transformed so cleverly.

AND NOW PRETTY, BLONDE-LOCKED MISS SALLY SHAW, DAUGHTER OF THE T. MOTT SHAWs of Concord, sails away to the Old World, another debutante to cap her first winter with foreign travel. She is even now on the high seas, and plans to visit with friends in England before crossing to the Continent for further voyages. She and her year-or-so-older sister, Miss Isabel Shaw, are two of the smart young set girls who back to the twilight of great popularity, each possessing in great degree that indefinable thing called charm.

DANCING FESTIVAL HELD IN JORDAN HALL

An audience that crowded Jordan Hall attended the annual dancing festival of pupils of Miss Marie Paparella, Deliber "Coppola" was the place of the evening, and a symphony orchestra, conducted by Joseph Pilger, supported them. Miss Hilda Russell, dressed the character of Swanda, Miss Kathryn Josephs was seen as Frank, Miss Marie De Nello as Coppelia, and Miss Ella Barry took the title role. Numerous dancers joined in the ensemble dances and talented soloists.

COOLIDGE TO GO DRY TO WAR ON TO WISCONSIN SMITH, RITCHIE

Washington, April 25.—The Summer White House may be established at Lake Geneva, eighty miles from Chicago. It has been learned from an authoritative source. President Coolidge has indicated definite acceptance of the offer of the beautiful estate of William Wisley, Jr., on the Wisconsin lake for his summer residence. The President, Mrs. Coolidge and John are expected to leave Washington about June 11. In selecting a southern Wisconsin location for his summer abode, it was pointed out to the President, he would not only spend the middle West but bring himself into close contact with the second largest city in the nation. Lake Geneva is almost entirely enclosed during the hot months by the business and society leaders of Chicago.

error Ritchie of Maryland not Senator Reed of Missouri, who hopes to be the recipients of the Smith following when it becomes certain Smith cannot be nominated, would likewise be unfavorable, as their records are also unfavorable.

Bleak House

TUKINGHORN, the solicitor, showed the papers of the dead man, and identified him as Captain Haddon, the father of the boy and the lover years before of the young Lady Dedlock. He confronted her with the facts and held the threat of exposure over her.

MEANWHILE, Miss Horner, the French maid, whom Lady Dedlock had discharged, attempted to force Tukinghorn to tell her the truth. She suspected that he knew something of Lady Dedlock's past, but she threatened to have her arrested if she continued to annoy him.

A DA CLARE and Richard Carstone, Mr. Jarndyce's wards, married, but not even his love for his wife could save Richard. He spent his time poring over legal papers, dreaming of the day when he would inherit the Jarndyce estate. Finally he was taken ill.

By Charles Dickens

TUKINGHORN had warned Lady Dedlock that he planned to reveal her past to her husband, Sir Leicester. She decided to go to his office to make a last plea for mercy. Later he was found murdered and Lady Dedlock was suspected. (Continued Tomorrow)

AVOID THE CHRONIC KICKER; HE HAS THE WRONG IDEA

Keep away from the man who is continually talking about things and conditions that he thinks are wrong. Certainly, there are many things about which to complain. But as certainly there are many things with which no fault can be found. The chronic kicker is lacking in the material needed to make a good life. He has the wrong perspective. The habitual fault-finder does not look for good because it does not fit his way of thinking. Two much association with a kicker is liable to warp your opinions. Perhaps you have come under such influence so that now you see something wrong with every undertaking. Why go through life looking for trouble? You may not have much material wealth, but you should have an abundance of joy. Don't belittle your own life by being a chronic kicker. Copyright 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A TERRIBLE REVELATION—Rosalind rushed into the library. A guest seized her and commanded her to stand still. "Don't look," he ordered, "something terrible has happened!" The girl fought, but he held her tightly against him, turning her face away from the group of curious guests gathering excitedly in another room. Rosalind wrestled to free herself. "What is it?" she cried. Then, fighting frantically, she broke away and rushed into the other room. There, struggling to speak, lay Samuel Manton in a pool of blood.

ROSALIND COLLAPSES—Rosalind stopped, horror-stricken. Men grasped her to hold her back, but she freed herself and bent down over the millionaire. He tried vainly to speak. But only unintelligible words came from his lips. Strong arms lifted Rosalind to her feet and escorted her out of the room. A woman guest placed a damp handkerchief to her head. Suddenly she felt very faint. Her head reeled. She clutched at the nearest person, missed, and plunged heavily to the floor in a deep swoon.

MANTON FOUND DEAD—Samuel Manton had been shot through the heart. He died as Rosalind left the room. A call was sent in to the police. Guests explained to arriving detectives that the millionaire had stepped into his bedroom to retrieve the wedding ring he had left on his dressing table, when there was the muffled sound of voices, a struggle and then—the pistol shot. Sergeant Gallagher took charge. "There's something phoney here," he declared. "Where's the girl he was to marry?"

That Is What Edison Said About Genius and Success

THE RIGHT KEY
TRY THIS PICTURE ON SOME YOUNG MAN WITH MORE ABILITY THAN AMBITION.

Youth instinctively hates and resists hard work. Boys and girls do what they like to do. Education and training are usually arranged—unnecessarily—so that the young do not like them.

The difficult problem of fathers and mothers is to make youth overcome its dislike of hard work. It can be done if interest can be aroused.

The boy that would not regulate his diet at home will sit patiently at the training table in his college, eating as ordered—for the sake of future victory.

The boy that would not willingly go on an errand for his mother will put on shoes with spikes and funny little running breeches cut off short, and in his bare legs race around a cinder path by the hour hoping that some day somebody will say that he won a race and honored his school or college.

Show this picture to the young man who has ability but lacks ambition. Hard work is the key that unlocks success. Ambition is the mental key that unlocks the store of energy in a human mind. It is not impossible to awaken ambition, even in the most hopeless case, if you can find the right work.

Everything is hard work. It is hard work to be born—hard for the mother and for the child.

There is not a single great success in all history, no real success, that did not have hard work and much discouragement for its foundation.

You must not only work hard, but form the habit of hard work, practice it until it is hard no longer.

With even average intelligence, there is nothing but hard work necessary to make a good success. He who will can be independent. Not all can be famous or counted among the men of genius, of whom Edison said that their success is ten per cent inspiration and ninety per cent perspiration.

But every man who will select the right key, even though it be a little heavy to lift, can open the door and go through. This is a good picture of success to paste up where it can be seen by boys fifteen years of age and older—up to fifty.

Strike Up the Band!

Here Comes the Navy

The United States fleet, comprising 120 vessels of all types, which will drop anchor on Friday in the rivers surrounding Manhattan, will sail from New York on May 10 for exercises off the New England coast and joint manoeuvres with the army in the Narragansett Bay area.

The personnel of the fleet includes 2,277 officers, 23,637 enlisted bluejackets and 1,125 enlisted men of the Marine Corps.

All the Rhode Island Reds in the State they have helped to make famous could not begin to furnish the eggs which will be required for seven days' breakfasts for the visitors. The call has gone out for 20,000 dozens!

The merchants of Newport, and wholesale meat and provision dealers of Rhode Island as a whole, are staggered by the fleet's food requirements for a single week.

The demand is for 5,333 bushels of potatoes, 133,000 pounds of fresh beef, 16,000 pounds of pork loins, 5,000 pounds of mutton, 7,500 pounds of veal, 8,000 pounds of rounds of beef, 5,000 pounds of loins, 8,000 pounds of butter, 75,000 pounds of frankfurters, 8,000 pounds of pork sausage, 5,000 pounds of bologna, 20,000 pounds of ham, 16,000 pounds of bacon and 6,000 pounds of liver.

Oh, 16,000 pounds of frozen chicken, 2,800 pounds of frozen fowl, 62,000 pounds of bread, 1,800 gallons of ice cream, 50,000 pounds of cabbage, 37,000 pounds of onions and 62 TONS of fruit.

We can forgive the business men of fashionable Boston, if, after a week's business of this description, they declare unanimously for the scheme of Rear Admiral Sims, retired, to sell the Portsmouth, Boston, New York, Norfolk and Charleston navy yards and create AT NEWPORT a "real" navy base.

LESSONS FROM JOB AND HIS WIFE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

"CURSE God and die!" exclaimed Job's wife when calamity piled upon him. "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him," answered Job. And these two attitudes still characterize the world.

The woman reasoned that because her husband lost his flocks and houses, his children died, and boils came on him, therefore if there was a Providence it was a malicious one. Something in Job's nature made him argue more deeply, clinging to his faith in the eternal goodness.

Today the issue is still fresh. When the young wife dies at the very time her husband and children need her most; when the saint has a cancer and the drunkard's liver remains in sound health; when the good and kind fall into poverty and the wicked wax fat and kick, there are those who jeer and say, "Where now is your good God, and what kind of a moral universe do you call this?"

Not long ago there appeared in the "Meure," of Paris, a most bitter arraignment of Divinity because the present monstrous chaos of horror had been permitted in Europe. It expressed the query of many, "If it is the law of history that righteousness prosper and evil is punished, if the meek shall inherit the earth, and blondy men stumble on to ruin, why this hideous war?"

But Job's decision was the sounder. Maeterlinck has clearly put it in modern terms, in his "Wisdom and Destiny," saying that the popular notion is superficial and mistakes entirely the grounds of ethical conviction.

For, he declares, our belief in morality arises not from the apparent justice of the universe, but from its apparent injustice.

If every good deed were straightaway visibly rewarded and every bad deed immediately punished, we should not believe in justice at all, we should all be slaves, unreasoning children, and time-wasters.

We become moral only when we are thrown back upon our instincts by the seeming injustice of destiny.

Morality is not produced by any weighing of profit and loss, nor by rewards and punishments; morality is not a policy. It is not adopted by the shrewd and wise because it pays; it is believed in by the simple and heroic because it does not pay.

The man who sees how a good deed will profit him, and hence does it, is not moral; he is cunning. It is the man who does not see, yet does his good deed from inner compulsion, that is moral.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELISIE ROBINSON

HAVE you a Broken Blossom in your family circle?

Five years ago Bert was the proudest guy in all this land because of the fact. He didn't think of her as a Broken Blossom. He called her The Little Woman and it used to give him a big kick to bring her coffee to the bed in the morning.

That coffee idea went 100 per cent with Lila too. For seven long, nagging years she had been teaching school and getting sicker of the job every hour. Funny thing about school teaching it seems to develop an "edginess" which no other job does.

Drives some women in on themselves. Spills their focus. If Lila had been in on herself, by the time Bert came along she was all gummed up with the idea that she was the World's Worst Victim. And when he offered to take care of her forever and ever she leaped at the offer.

You know those big big man fellows that like to assert their virility by doing chores for some frail little female? Bert was that sort. Only Lila was the frail. She had thought she was. Which is different from Bert who was just willing to be helpless and taken-care-of as if she'd been totally paralyzed. And Bert was the boy to do the job.

For the first time in his life, so finely that Lila didn't see any sense in getting well and doing her own chores.

First she was a little ashamed to be around while Bert waited on her, but that soon wore off and she began making an actual business of being a Broken Blossom.

After a while she was developing a new evaporation every day or so. The best doctors busy trying new kinds of cures, she'd brighten up a little after every one of them, but she always slumped back.

And Lila can't see why Bert is such a brute. She needs to read that ancient story about the goose that laid the golden egg. And also the story about the man working the willing horse to death.

The pearls that you wear, so gleaming, no whiter than your thought, your rubies whose deep splendor, as of fiery embers wrought. They come you love, these jewels, fair through patient love and art were brought to deck your hair, more solid grew above your head, your hands like stars to guide you on your happy way.
